

SOMEONE ELSE'S DREAM

About acknowledging my privileges

A first-person perspective investigation on the often unnoticed innate advantages that makes our life so easy without us noticing. A collection of daily benefits divided into economical, educational, physical, skin color, gender, place of birth and sexuality. A walk in the shoes of the least advantaged ones in order to shine the light and start the spark regarding the various problems that design can solve with a work of empathy and invention.

Noticing as a method

